This worksheet is great for educational use both at home and in the classroom! We have been working on spelling at our house recently and I will openly admit that I was not aware of any of these spelling rules about doubling consonants! I have found and a simple worksheet (scroll to the end for the worksheet) I have created to practice the application of these spelling rules for doubling consonants. Single syllable words - doubling consonant spelling rules are very rarely consistent 100% of the time but there are tips you can use to help kids (and adults!) work out when they need to double the consonant which I will note in the next section. This rule is also known as the 1-1-1 rule. So if the word has: 1 syllable1 vowel1 consonant, which follows the vowel You double the last consonant, which follows the vowel You double the last consonant, which follows the vowel You double the last consonant, which follows the vowel You double the last consonant when adding a suffixed vowel - 'ing', 'ed', 'er', 'est'. and give base words different meanings. Examples following the 1:1:1 rule are: stop to stoppingfib to fibbedfat to fatterbig to biggest More than one syllable words - doubling rules do get more complicated. For a full breakdown of the rules, read this post -When to Double Consonants in Spelling: Rules and Examples. If you want to keep it simple and give your child some general tips to follow you can start with the premise that the doubling rule can also be used for words with more than one syllable when these words end in a single consonant and the primary stress is on the final syllable. So, if the word has: More than 1 syllableEnds in 1 consonantThe second consonant follows a vowel, and the second vowel is bearing the primary stress Then you can double the consonant. Some examples are: begin - beginningprefer - preferredtravel - travelling A shortcut way of thinking is if it is a verb you can usually (not always!) double the consonant because verbs tend to have the stress on the second syllable - see the image below and the resource section at the end for more information on syllable word list I created for one of the kids to practice - doubling consonants This is a simple word list I created for one of the kids to practice the application of the doubling consonant rules. I let them have the rules in front of them and the 2 syllable stress guide for the first few times so they could actively learn them, then had them practice-doubling-consonantsDownload If you would like to download an editable version of this document you can do so via this link - Google Spreadsheet -PWK Spelling practice - doubling consonants. If you know me well, you know that I'm not keen on teaching tons of spelling rules to learners. The main reason is that most of the spelling rules commonly taught have more exceptions that words that follow the rule. This only serves to confuse our learners. But the 1-1-1 doubling rule is very consistent {if learners keep in mind the two things I mention later in this post} and can help learners move from reading and spelling shorter words. 1-1-1 Doubling Rule What exactly is the 1-1-1 doubled before adding a vowel suffix such as -ed or -ing. This 1-page chart can help learners remember when you use the 1-1-1 rule for doubling final consonants. *It is important for learners to keep two things in mind: 1. The 1-1-1 rule applies to vowel suffixes? A vowel suffixes? A vowel suffix is a word ending that starts with a vowel such as -ing, -ed, -y, etc. A consonant suffix is a word ending that starts with a consonant such as -ment, -s, -tion, etc. 2. Not all final consonants are what they seem. For example, the letter x is not doubled in English {boxing}. Neither are y and w are usually a part of a vowel team {snow or play} and act as a vowel in this case, not a consonant. Also included in this free sample is an interactive page where learners cut, glue, then spell words by adding -ing. It's a mixed page including words that follow the 1-1-1 rule and words are 1-1-1 while others, like thank, are not. {Grab our ENTIRE Interactive Inflecting Endings Pack OR keep scrolling for the freebies!
